U. D. C. LEADER

Mrs. Emma V. Tharp McGregor, wife of the late Andrew McGregor, of this city, was buried Friday afternoon in the City Cemetery, the funeral taking place from the home of her son, Sterling P. McGregor, on McInnis Avenue, at 3:30 o'clock.

Rev. Paul D. Hardin, pastor of the Main Street Methodist Church, officiated, assisted by Rev. J. L. Sells, of Wiggins, Miss., and the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of that church had charge of the music. The young girls of the Bonnie Blue Flag chapter, Daughters of the Confederacy, organized by Mrs. McGregor, took care of the floral offerings which were numerous and beautiful. All Friday morning had been spent by the Hattiesburg U. D. C. chapter in making a Confederate flag which was draped around the coffin of this veteran's widow and real "Daughter of the Confederacy."

Among the floral offerings was a handsome wreath from the Mississippi Division, United Daughters of the Confederacy, of which Mrs. McGregor was an officer, being state organizer of the Children of the Confederacy.

Of the sixteen children born to this couple only three girls and four boys survive—Mrs. D. M. Goff, of Moss Point, Mrs. R. R. Rhodes, of Jacksonville, Mrs. V. H. Thompkins, of Hattiesburg, Me. son, W. A. McGregor, of Carson, La.; R. L. McGregor, of Sumter, S. C.; J. W. McGregor, of Wiggins, Miss., and Sterling McGregor, of Hattiesburg. A daughter, J. W. Tharp, of Mobile, also survives, and a number of grand children.

Mrs. McGregor, who made her home most of the time with her son, Sterling McGregor, in this city, had a stroke of apoplexy while on a visit to another son, J. W. McGregor, in Wiggins, last Tuesday, which ended in her death Thursday.

She was 72 years old, having been born in 1845, in Yazoo City, Miss., in which place, and in New Orleans, her girlhood was spent. She was married to Andrew McLean McGregor in 1865, at the close of the civil war and so, having been brought up during a critical period in the history of the South, she early learned self-control, bravery, and self-denial and she showed a childlike faith in God through all the dark days following the war.

A faithful member of the Methodist church, she was also a staunch believer in, and worker for, temperance, holding office in the W. C. T. U. at different times. Her church came first and her loyalty to the South, next. At the time of her death, old as she was, Mrs. McGregor was doing active work as an officer in the following organizations and societies: President of the Bonnie Blue Flag Chapter, Children of the Confederacy, of Hattiesburg; Honorary President of the Hattiesburg Chapter United Daughters of the Confederacy; State Organizer of the Children of the Confederacy; recording secretary of Kamp Park Commission, representing the Hattiesburg Chapter, U. D. C.; Historian for life of Hattiesburg Chapter, U. D. C.; and treasurer of Myra Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star.
